[1] Hasnae Taleb is one of the most inspiring figures in the world of finance and entrepreneurship. She is a stock trader, investor, founder, and media personality who has gained international recognition. She made history by becoming the first Arab and African woman to be nominated as the “Shewolf of Nasdaq,” and her achievements have been recognized by important institutions around the world.

[2] Hasnae Taleb was born in Khénifra, Morocco, into a modest family. As a child, she was sensitive, curious, and full of ambition. At the beginning, she dreamed of becoming a singer to influence people through her voice. Being the eldest of three daughters, she then started believing that her future would be different. “I knew deep inside that my life would not be ordinary,” she explains. While still in high school, she wanted to carry on her higher studies in the United States and started applying to many programs there despite her limited financial means and lack of connections.

[3] At the age of 17, her excellent academic results allowed her to join the NASA Space Camp through the Marshall program. This experience marked a turning point in her life. During her stay in the United States, she managed to obtain a scholarship and convinced her parents to let her continue her studies there. While studying for a Bachelor of Business Administration, she worked hard to support herself and discovered her passion for financial markets after a teacher told her that anyone could trade in the stock market.

[4] Determined to succeed, Hasnae adopted a strict self-learning strategy based on reading, practicing, analyzing, and learning from her mistakes. Her efforts paid off when she was recruited by Morgan Stanley in 2014, and later joined Nasdaq as a professional trader in 2015. She became the first Arab and African woman to hold such a position and managed hundreds of millions of dollars at a young age. By the age of 23, she had already earned her first million dollars.

[5] After gaining valuable experience in global markets, Hasnae realized that finance should serve the real economy. “Finance is not just about numbers; it is about creating real impact,” she says. For this reason, she founded Mintiply Capital in Dubai in 2022. Through her company, she connects investors with innovative projects in fields such as biotechnology, artificial intelligence, and clean energy. Despite facing challenges and being underestimated because of her gender, age, and origin, she turned these difficulties into motivation and strength. “Every obstacle I faced became a source of power,” she affirms.

[6] Today, Hasnae Taleb manages billions of dollars in assets and continues to inspire people worldwide. She also shares her knowledge through her TV show “Awwal Malyoun,” promoting financial literacy. In 2025, she became the first woman trader to ring the bell at the Abu Dhabi Securities Exchange. Her success story proves that determination, hard work, and self-belief can turn dreams into reality and create a positive impact on society.
